Efectrician Edinon's Joke.

Odd stories are told of doings at Wizard Edison's home in Orange. One of the most amusing occurrences there happened not long family, which came here the first of since when a stranger was visiting Mr. Edison. After an evening stopped a few days at the Interlargely devoted to a discussion of electricity, the guest went to bed. He had barely drawn the covers over him and settled down to sleep, one is a young girl of fourteen, and when a voice, apparently from the clock on the dressing-case, said, in measured tones: "It is now 11 nounced a genuine smallpox one. o'clock."

covers, sat bolt upright, and felt the hair rising all over his body. Could be have been dreaming? No, he was wide awake. Arising, he turned on the electric light, searched every corner of the room, examined the innocent-looking clock, and finally called in Mr. Edison. The latter assured him that there was no one in the room, and with half quieted pated. In the meantime vaccinafears the guest returned to bed.

"The hour of midnight has arrived! Prepare to die."

There was no mistake this time, waiting to turn on the electric light, rushed across to Edison's room, The wizard, broad awake and half dead with laughter, permitted hisguest to rap three or four times and then responded to his call.

"Mr. Edison," said the disturbed "Mr. Edison," said the sleeper, "there is something uncauny naily, sleeper, "there is something uncauny naily, F. J. CHENFY & CO. Toledo, O. F. J. CHENFY & CO. Toledo, O. here all night if you'd give me the place."

Edison suppressed his laughter, heard his guest's story, and then, going to the room, showed the stranger that there was a tiny phonograph concealed in the clock and so set as to give forth its solemn announcement of the hours. The guest slept soundly for the remainder of the night.
